

FIGHTING SLAVERY

FAITH IN ACTION

NICK KINSELLA/PETER STANLEY

EXECUTIVE EDITORS

WITH CONTRIBUTIONS
FROM 22 AUTHORS

A new book published April 17, 2015, highlights the role that faith is playing in combatting human trafficking.

Over two hundred years ago William Wilberforce felt compelled to fight the evil of slavery that blighted society. Today, people with the same passion and desire for justice are working to fight modern slavery with modern tools and methods.

With over thirty years combined experience in fighting Human Trafficking, the executive editors of this book find themselves inspired by many individuals who are seeking to combat this evil. Many are unsung heroes, caring little for profile, but they are motivated, by their Christian faith and compassion, to respond with action. 22 modern day slavery fighters tell their stories and explain how putting faith into action can bring about change and save lives. The battle continues, but this book shows how it is being won in so many ways.

The royalties and a percentage of the publisher's profits from this book will be donated to victims and survivors of slavery.

NICK KINSELLA has been involved in combatting human trafficking for many years and is an acknowledged expert in the field internationally. Nick served as a police officer for 30 years, holding a number of senior positions within both the UK Police service, the National Criminal Intelligence Service, (NCIS), and Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, (HMIC).

Nick has played a key role in the development of the UK anti-trafficking strategy and is regarded as one of its founding architects. He created the multi-agency teams that secured the first UK conviction for Human Trafficking and is also responsible for the two largest and most successful national anti-trafficking operations and campaigns in the UK. In 2006 he founded the United Kingdom Human Trafficking Centre, (UKHTC), serving as Chief Executive Officer. In 2008 he founded the UK fund for Victims of Human Trafficking. Nick was a board member for the UN Global Trust Fund for victims of Trafficking 2010 - 2013

PETER STANLEY left a well-established career in the City of London's financial district to pursue the call of God into humanitarian work. His first role was as Strategy Director for the international campaign Stop the Traffik (www.stopthetraffik.org) – which he helped to develop into a global movement of individuals, communities and organisations working to prevent human trafficking around the world.

Peter has become a widely respected consultant to many diverse groups combatting modern slavery. He has also founded a mentoring agency for troubled teenagers which he runs in his home town of Croydon, Greater London.
